PREFACE

This report presents statistics on the number of inhabitants of Puerto Rico, its municipalities, and barrios. In addition, separate figures are also presented for urban places and other areas of Puerto Rico. These data are based upon tabulations from the Seventeenth Decennial Census of the population of the United States, its Territories, possessions, etc., conducted as of April 1, 1950. Provision for the Seventeenth Decennial Census was made in the act providing for the Fifteenth and subsequent decennial censuses which was approved on June 18, 1929.

The major portion of the information compiled from the Census of Population of 1950 will appear in Volume I, Number of Inhabitants, and in Volume II, Characteristics of the Population. This report is a preprint of Chapter 53 (Puerto Rico) of Volume I, which is to present, in a single publication, statistics on the number of inhabitants for each State, Territory, possession, etc.

The materials presented here will also appear as Chapter A of Part 53 (Puerto Rico) of Volume II. Volume II will comprise a series of separately published parts, one for each State and Territory, one for the possessions, etc., and a summary for the United States. The use of separate parts makes the basic materials on characteristics of the population for a given area available to the public in a single publication. Within each part, Chapter A will recapitulate the statistics on the number and distribution of the population; Chapter B will present statistics on the general characteristics of the population of the various political subdivisions; and Chapter C will present data on the detailed characteristics of the population of the larger areas.

The materials presented here were prepared under the supervision of Howard G. Brunzman, Chief, Population and Housing Division, and Robert B. Voight, Assistant Chief for Operations, by Joel Williams, Chief, Territories and Possessions Statistics Section, assisted by Laura L. Heriot and Charles P. Brinkman. The collection of the information on which these statistics are based was under the supervision of Lowell T. Galt, Chief, Field Division. The geographic work was under the supervision of Clarence E. Batschelet, Chief, Geography Division.

PREFACIO

Este boletín presenta estadísticas sobre el número de habitantes de Puerto Rico, sus municipios, y sus barrios. Además, se presentan también datos para lugares urbanos y otras zonas de Puerto Rico. Estos datos se basan en las tabulaciones del Décimoséptimo Censo Decenal de la población de los Estados Unidos, sus territorios posesiones, etc., tomado el 1° de abril de 1950. Autoridad para el Décimoséptimo Censo Decenal proviene de la Ley aprobada el 18 de junio de 1929 autorizando el Décimoquinto y subsecuentes censos decenales.

Gran parte de la información obtenida del Censo de Población de 1950 aparecerá en el Volumen I, Número de Habitantes, y en Volumen II, Características de la Población. Este boletín es una edición preliminar del capítulo 53 (Puerto Rico) del volumen I, el cual presentará en una sola publicación estadísticas sobre el número de habitantes para cada Estado, territorio, posesión, etc.

La materia presentada aquí también aparecerá como el capítulo A de la Parte 53 (Puerto Rico) del volumen II. Volumen II contendrá una serie de partes publicadas por separado, una para cada Estado y territorio, una para las posesiones, etc., y un resumen para los Estados Unidos. El uso de partes separadas permite que la materia básica, sobre las características de la población de una área especificada, sea disponible al público en una sola publicación. Dentro de cada parte, el capítulo A repetirá las estadísticas sobre el número y la distribución de la población; el capítulo B presentará estadísticas generales sobre la población de las varias subdivisiones políticas; y el capítulo C presentará datos más detallados sobre las características de la población de las áreas más grandes.

La materia presentada aquí fué preparada bajo la supervisión de Howard G. Brunzman, Jefe, División de Población y Viviendas, y Robert B. Voight, Jefe Auxiliar para Operaciones, por Joel Williams, Jefe de la Sección de Estadísticas de los Territorios y Posesiones, asistido por Laura L. Heriot y Charles P. Brinkman. La recolección de la información en la cual se basan las estadísticas fué bajo la supervisión de Lowell T. Galt, Jefe, División de Campo. El trabajo geográfico fué hecho bajo la supervisión de Clarence C. Batschelet, Jefe de la División de Geografía.

PUERTO RICO

Number of Inhabitants

The island.—The island of Puerto Rico was formally surrendered by Spain to the United States in October 1898 and by the Treaty of Paris, signed December 10 of the same year at the close of the Spanish-American War, was ceded to the United States, together with Vieques, Culebra, and other small adjacent islands. The population of Puerto Rico on April 1, 1950, was 2,210,703. Puerto Rico and the small adjacent islands have a land area of 3,423 square miles. In 1950 there was an average of 645.8 inhabitants per square mile, as compared with an average of 546.1 in 1940. Among the Territories and possessions of the United States, Puerto Rico ranked first in population and third in area.

In 1765, when the first census of Puerto Rico was taken by the Spanish Government, it had a population of 44,883 (table 1). In 1950, 185 years later, the population was nearly 50 times as large. Between 1899, the date of the first census taken by the Government of the United States, and 1950 the population more than doubled. The rates of population growth over the 51-year period ranged from a low of 16.3 percent for the decade ending in 1920 to a high of 21.1 percent for the decade ending in 1940. The numerical increase of 341,448 between 1940 and 1950 was the largest intercensal gain in the history of Puerto Rico and represented an increase of 18.3 percent over the 1940 population of 1,869,255.

Usual place of residence.—In accordance with Census practice, each person enumerated in the 1950 Census was counted as an inhabitant of his usual place of residence or usual place of abode, which is generally construed to mean the place where he lives and sleeps most of the time. This place is not necessarily the same as his legal residence, voting residence, or domicile, although, in the vast majority of cases, the use of these different bases of classification would produce identical results.

In the application of this rule, persons were not always counted as residents of the places in which they happened to be found by the census enumerators. Visitors found staying in private homes were not ordinarily interviewed there. Information on persons away from their usual place of residence was obtained from other members of their families, landlords, etc. If an entire family was expected to be away during the whole period of the enumeration, information on it was obtained from neighbors. A matching process was used to eliminate duplicate reports for persons who reported for themselves while away and were also reported by their families at home.

Persons in the armed forces quartered on military installations were enumerated as residents of the municipalities and barrios in which their installations were located. Members of their families were enumerated where they actually resided. In the 1950 Census, college students living away from home were considered residents of the communities in which they were residing while attending college, rather than as persons temporarily absent from their parental homes as was the practice in 1940. In 1950 the crews of vessels of the American Merchant Marine were counted as part of the population of the ports in which their vessels were berthed on April 1. In 1940 such persons were treated as part of the population of the port from which the vessels operated. Inmates of institutions, who ordinarily live there for long periods of time, were counted as inhabitants of the place in which the institution was

Número de Habitantes

La isla.—La isla de Puerto Rico fué formalmente entregada por España a los Estados Unidos en octubre de 1898, y de acuerdo con el Tratado de París, firmado el 10 de diciembre de ese mismo año al finalizar la Guerra Hispanoamericana, cedida a los Estados Unidos, junto con Vieques, Culebra, y otros islotes adyacentes. La población de Puerto Rico el 1° de abril de 1950 era 2,210,703. La superficie de Puerto Rico, incluyendo las islas pequeñas adyacentes, es de 3,423 millas cuadradas. El promedio de habitantes por milla cuadrada en 1950 fué 645.8, comparado con 546.1 en 1940. Entre los territorios y posesiones de los Estados Unidos, Puerto Rico ocupa el primer puesto en población y el tercer puesto en superficie.

En 1765, cuando el gobierno español tomó el primer censo de Puerto Rico, la población fué 44,883 (tabla 1). En 1950, ciento ochenta y cinco años después, la población había aumentado casi 50 veces. Entre 1899, la fecha en la cual el gobierno de los Estados Unidos tomó el primer censo, y 1950 la población aumentó más del doble. Las tasas de crecimiento de la población durante el período de 51 años varían de 16.3 por ciento, la más baja, en la década terminada en 1920 a 21.1 por ciento, la más alta, en la década terminada en 1940. El aumento numérico de 341,448 en el período entre 1940 a 1950 fué el crecimiento intercensal más grande en la historia de Puerto Rico y representa un aumento de 18.3 por ciento sobre la población de 1,869,255 en 1940.

Lugar habitual de residencia.—De acuerdo con la práctica censal, toda persona enumerada en el censo de 1950 fué considerada habitante de su lugar habitual de residencia, es decir, por regla general, el lugar donde la persona habitualmente vive y duerme. El lugar habitual de residencia no es necesariamente el lugar de residencia legal ni el lugar de votar ni el domicilio, sin embargo, en la mayoría de los casos, la aplicación de estas distintas bases de clasificación resultaría lo mismo.

En la aplicación de esta regla, todas las personas no fueron siempre incluidas como residentes de los lugares donde fueron encontradas por los enumeradores del censo. Visitantes en hogares privados por lo general no fueron entrevistados. La información para personas ausentes de sus lugares habituales de residencia fué obtenida de otros miembros de la familia, de amas de casa, etc. En el caso de una familia la cual estaría ausente durante el período completo de la enumeración, el enumerador obtuvo la información de los vecinos. Se utilizó un procedimiento de cotejo para eliminar duplicación de informe para esas personas que informaron mientras estaban afuera y también fueron informados por sus familias en sus hogares.

Personas en las fuerzas armadas acuarteladas en puestos militares fueron enumeradas como residentes de los municipios y barrios en los cuales estaban ubicados los puestos. Los miembros de sus familias fueron enumerados donde actualmente residían. En el censo de 1950, se consideraron los estudiantes de universidad como residentes de la comunidad donde vivían mientras asistían a un colegio o universidad, y no como residentes temporalmente ausentes de los hogares de sus padres, tal como se hizo en 1940. En 1950 las tripulaciones de los barcos mercantes bajo la bandera americana fueron incluidas en la población de los puertos donde estaban anclados el 1° de abril. En 1940, tales personas fueron incluidas como habitantes del puerto de salida de los barcos. Personas reclusas en instituciones, en las cuales permanecen por largo tiempo, fueron incluidas como habitantes del lugar donde la located; whereas patients in general hospitals, who ordinarily have short stays, were counted at, or allocated to, their homes. All persons without a usual place of residence were counted where they were enumerated.

Urban and rural population.—As in previous censuses, the urban population of Puerto Rico has been defined as that living in cities, towns, and villages of 2,500 inhabitants or more. The remaining population is classified as rural.

The 1950 urban population of Puerto Rico numbered 894,813 persons, or 40.5 percent of the total population (table 1). This population was living in the 54 urban places in the island. Two-fifths of the urban population were living in the two cities of 100,000 inhabitants or more—San Juan and Río Piedras (table 2). An additional quarter of the urban population was accounted for by the four other places of 25,000 to 100,000 inhabitants.

All 14 places of 10,000 inhabitants or more shared in the growth of the urban population between 1940 and 1950. The largest numerical increase as well as the most rapid rate of growth—112,503 and 564.3 percent, respectively—was recorded by Río Piedras city. A large amount of the increase is attributable to annexations of territory by the city during the decade. The smallest percentage gain was the increase of 14.8 percent by Guayama town.

The rural population of Puerto Rico comprised 1,315,890 persons, or 59.5 percent of the total population (table 1). Of the rural population, 51,201 persons, or 3.9 percent, were living in the 31 towns or villages having fewer than 2,500 inhabitants (table 2).

Trends in the urban and rural population.—The 1950 urban population of Puerto Rico was more than six times as large as the urban population of 138,703 reported in 1899 (table 1). The numerical increase of 328,456 between 1940 and 1950 accounted for more than two-fifths of the increase over the 51-year period and 96 percent of the increase in total population between 1940 and 1950. The proportion of the population of Puerto Rico living in urban places nearly tripled over the 51-year period, increasing from 14.6 percent in 1899 to 40.5 percent in 1950.

The rural population of Puerto Rico rose steadily from 814,540 in 1899 to 1,315,890 in 1950 (table 1). In each of the intercensal periods both the numerical increase and the rate of growth of the urban population exceeded those for the rural population. As a result of the greater increases in the urban population, the proportion of the population of Puerto Rico living in rural territory declined steadily from 85.4 to 59.5 percent between 1899 and 1950.

Municipalities.—For purposes of local government, Puerto Rico is divided into 77 areas called municipalities. Between 1940 and 1950, 72 of the municipalities increased in population (table 4). In two of the municipalities—Río Piedras and Cataño—the population more than doubled over the 10-year period. Río Piedras also had the largest numerical increase—75,699. The municipalities of San Juan and Ponce had numerical increases of 55,520 and 21,694, respectively. The combined increase in these three municipalities accounted for 44.8 percent of the increase in population for Puerto Rico. Of the five municipalities which lost population between 1940 and 1950, Vieques was the only one which had also lost population in the preceding decade.

Minor civil divisions.—To the primary political divisions into which counties in continental United States are divided, the Bureau of the Census applies the general term "minor civil divisions." The municipalities in Puerto Rico are divided into barrios which for Census purposes are considered minor civil divisions. Neither the barrios nor the cities and towns which occupy the closely settled areas have any form of government distinct from that of the municipality in which they are located. A number of the barrios are divided into sub-barrios. All but one of the barrios so divided form parts of cities. The single exception is Aguirre barrio in the municipality of Salinas.

institución estaba ubicada; mientras que pacientes reclusos en hospitales y clínicas, por corto tiempo fueron incluidos o asignados a sus hogares. Toda persona sin lugar habitual de residencia fué incluida con la población donde fué enumerada.

Población urbana y rural.—Como en los censos anteriores, la población urbana se define como aquella que vive en las ciudades, pueblos y aldeas de 2,500 o más habitantes. El resto de la población se clasifica como rural.

La población urbana de Puerto Rico en 1950 era 894,813 personas, o 40.5 por ciento de la población total (tabla 1). Esta población vivía en los 54 lugares urbanos de la isla. Dos quintas partes de la población urbana vivían en las dos ciudades de más de 100,000 habitantes—es decir, en San Juan y Río Piedras (tabla 2). Otra cuarta parte de la población urbana vivía en los cuatro lugares urbanos de 25,000 a 100,000 habitantes.

Los catorce lugares urbanos de 10,000 o más habitantes participaron en el crecimiento urbano entre 1940 y 1950. La ciudad de Río Piedras registró no sólo el aumento numérico más alto sino también la tasa de crecimiento más alta—112,503 y 564.3 por ciento, respectivamente. Gran parte de tal aumento puede atribuirse a la anexión de territorio por la ciudad durante la década. El pueblo de Guayama con 14.8 por ciento de aumento tuvo el porcentaje de crecimiento más bajo.

La población rural de Puerto Rico comprendía 1,315,890 personas, o 59.5 por ciento de la población total (tabla 1). De la población rural 51,201 personas, o 3.9 por ciento, vivían en los 31 pueblos o aldeas con menos de 2,500 habitantes (tabla 2).

Tendencias de la población urbana y rural.—La población urbana de Puerto Rico en 1950 era más de seis veces la población urbana de 138,703, enumerada en 1899 (tabla 1). El aumento numérico de 328,456 entre 1940 y 1950 representó más de dos quintas partes del aumento en el período de 51 años y 96 por ciento del aumento de la población total entre 1940 y 1950. La proporción de la población de Puerto Rico que vivía en lugares urbanos casi triplicó durante el período de 51 años, ascendiendo de 14.6 por ciento en 1899 a 40.5 por ciento en 1950.

La población rural de Puerto Rico aumentó continuamente de 814,540 habitantes en 1899 a 1,315,890 en 1950 (tabla 1). En cada período intercensal el aumento numérico y la tasa de crecimiento de la población urbana excedieron los de la población rural. Como resultado de los aumentos mayores en la población urbana, la proporción de la población de Puerto Rico que vivía en el territorio rural decreció continuamente de 85.4 a 59.5 por ciento entre 1899 y 1950.

Municipios.—Para los efectos del gobierno local, Puerto Rico está dividido en 77 áreas llamadas municipios. Entre 1940 y 1950, 72 de los municipios aumentaron en población (tabla 4). La población de dos de los municipios—Río Piedras y Cataño—aumentó más del doble en el período de 10 años. Río Piedras también registró el aumento numérico más alto—75,699. Los municipios de San Juan y Ponce registraron aumentos numéricos de 55,520 y 21,694, respectivamente. El crecimiento total de los tres municipios representa el 44.8 por ciento del aumento de la población de Puerto Rico. De los cinco municipios que decrecieron entre 1940 y 1950, Vieques fué el único que también había decrecido en la década anterior.

Divisiones civiles menores.—A las divisiones políticas primarias en las cuales están divididos los condados de los Estados Unidos continentales, el Negociado del Censo aplica el término general "divisiones civiles menores." Los municipios de Puerto Rico están divididos en barrios los cuales para propósitos del censo se consideran divisiones civiles menores. Ni los barrios ni las ciudades y pueblos que ocupan el territorio densamente poblado tienen ninguna otra forma de gobierno local que la del municipio en que están ubicados. Cierta número de barrios están divididos en sub-barrios. Todos dichos barrios, exceptuando uno, constituyen parte de las ciudades. La sola excepción es el barrio de Aguirre en el municipio de Salinas.

Cities, towns, and villages.—In 1950 there were four places known as cities: San Juan, the capital of Puerto Rico, Mayagüez, Ponce, and Río Piedras. The place in which the government of the 73 remaining municipalities is located is known as a town. In all municipalities the city or the town bears the same name as the municipality in which it is located. In addition, there were eight places known as villages. Fifty-four of the places were urban places, that is, places of 2,500 inhabitants or more.

The relationship between the places and barrios varies considerably. The cities are composed of more than one barrio, with San Juan city also coextensive with the municipality of the same name. The towns are composed of one or more barrios. Two of the villages—Ensenada and Lofza Aldea—are coextensive with the barrios in which they are located; three villages—Florida, Jobos, and Puerto Jobos—form parts of barrios; and three—Central Aguirre, Coquí, and San Felipe—form sub-barrios of Aguirre barrio in the municipality of Salinas.

In table 5 the name of the city or town which is the seat of government of the municipality is presented first under the name of the municipality, followed by the names of the remaining barrios listed in alphabetical order. When a city or a town is made up of more than one barrio, the population of each barrio is shown in italics under the name of the city or town. The population of each sub-barrio also appears in italics under the population of the barrio in which it is located.

Senatorial districts.—Puerto Rico is divided into seven senatorial districts for electoral purposes. The composition of the seven districts is shown on the maps on pp. 53-2 to 53-5. In 1950 the districts ranged in population from District 7 (Humacao) with 260,990 inhabitants to District 1 (San Juan) with 577,500 inhabitants (table 7). All seven districts shared in the increase in the population of Puerto Rico, with the largest gain—179,770—having been recorded in District 1.

Ciudades, pueblos y aldeas.—En 1950, habían cuatro lugares designados ciudades en Puerto Rico: San Juan, la capital de Puerto Rico, Mayagüez, Ponce, y Río Piedras. El sitio en que está ubicado el gobierno local de los 73 municipios restantes se designa "pueblo." En todos los municipios, la ciudad o pueblo lleva el mismo nombre del municipio en el cual está ubicado. Además, habían ocho lugares designados aldeas. Cincuenta y cuatro de los lugares eran lugares urbanos, es decir, lugares con 2,500 o más habitantes.

La relación entre las ciudades, pueblos o aldeas y los barrios varía considerablemente. Las ciudades son compuestas de más de un barrio, la ciudad de San Juan, también es coextensiva con el municipio del mismo nombre. Los pueblos son compuestos de un barrio o más de uno. Dos de las aldeas—Ensenada y Lofza Aldea—son coextensivas con los barrios en los cuales están localizadas; tres aldeas—Florida, Jobos, y Puerto Jobos—constituyen partes de barrios; y tres—Central Aguirre, Coquí, y San Felipe—son sub barrios del barrio Aguirre en el municipio de Salinas.

En la tabla 5 el nombre de la ciudad o pueblo en que está ubicado el gobierno se anota primero bajo el nombre del municipio, seguido por los nombres de los barrios restantes en orden alfabético. Cuando una ciudad o pueblo está compuesta de más de un barrio, la población de cada barrio aparece en bastardilla bajo el nombre de la ciudad o pueblo. La población de cada sub barrio también aparece en bastardilla bajo la población del barrio en que está ubicado.

Distritos senatoriales.—Puerto Rico está dividido en siete distritos senatoriales para propósitos electorales. Los municipios que componen cada distrito se muestran en el mapa en las págs. 53-2 a 53-5. En 1950 los distritos variaron en población de 260,990 habitantes en el distrito 7 (Humacao) a 577,500 habitantes en el distrito 1 (San Juan) (tabla 7). Los siete distritos participaron en el aumento de la población de Puerto Rico; el distrito 1 registró el mayor aumento—179,770.
